Historical Timeline

- 1898 Founded during late Qing Dynasty as a German-Chinese hospital — one of China's earliest Western-medicine institutions, originally serving both the German concession population and local Chinese residents.
- 1949 Integrated into Shandong University medical education system. Expanded from single-building clinic to comprehensive teaching hospital.
- 1993 Officially affiliated with newly-established Qingdao University. Began multi-campus expansion strategy to meet growing demand across the Shandong Peninsula.
- 2018 Designated National Regional Medical Center by National Health Commission, recognizing its role as a tertiary referral hub for Eastern Shandong.
- 2023 Launched 23-story Medical Complex Building (医疗综合楼) at Laoshan Campus — 66,000 m² with independent outpatient clinics, operating rooms, and advanced imaging, purpose-built for international and VIP patient services.

Grade 3A — What It Means

China's hospital grading places Grade 3A (三级甲等) at the apex — fewer than 10% of hospitals achieve this. It signifies excellence in clinical quality, patient safety, research, teaching, and management. QDUH has maintained uninterrupted 3A accreditation for over three decades and reports directly to the National Health Commission.
